the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased by 1.5 million (1990–1999) and is projected to increase by a further 1.5 million by 2010 (Office of National Statistics 2000).

There is a growing awareness of the need to develop strategies to meet the needs of the ageing population. The Department of Health (2000) has identified the need to develop a 'new paradigm' of care for the ageing population. This paradigm is based on the concept of 'active ageing', which is defined as the process of optimising the opportunities for people to live healthy, productive and secure lives (Department of Health 2000).

The Department of Health (2000) has identified a number of key areas for action in order to achieve this paradigm. These include: (1) promoting healthy living; (2) promoting social participation; (3) promoting the role of the individual; (4) promoting the role of the community; (5) promoting the role of the state; and (6) promoting the role of the market.

The Department of Health (2000) has also identified a number of key areas for action in order to achieve this paradigm. These include: (1) promoting healthy living; (2) promoting social participation; (3) promoting the role of the individual; (4) promoting the role of the community; (5) promoting the role of the state; and (6) promoting the role of the market.

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased by 1.5 million, and the number of people aged 75 and over has increased by 1.2 million (Office for National Statistics 1999).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the needs of older people in the community. The Department of Health (1999) has published a strategy for older people, which sets out a vision for the future of older people's services. The strategy is based on the principle of 'active ageing', which is the process of enabling older people to live full, active lives. The strategy is based on the following principles: (1) older people should be able to live independently in their own homes; (2) older people should be able to participate in social and community activities; (3) older people should be able to access the services and resources they need; and (4) older people should be able to live in a safe and secure environment.

The strategy is based on the following principles: (1) older people should be able to live independently in their own homes; (2) older people should be able to participate in social and community activities; (3) older people should be able to access the services and resources they need; and (4) older people should be able to live in a safe and secure environment.
